Practice 2
Now you are going to listen to a script that discusses some characteristics of the Millennial Generation three times. Following each listening are some exercises that will help you have a clear understanding of the content and meaning of the script.

1. Listening Listen for the General Topic
Listen to the script and answer the questions that follow.
() What is the general topic of the script?
(A) When members of the Millennial Generation were born
(B) The special characteristics of the Millennial Generation
(C) What the word "millennial" means
(D) The ease with which Millennials use computers and cell phones

2. Listening Listen for Key Words
Listen to the script for the second time. As you listen, pay attention to the list of key words below. Circle the words that appear in the script.

millennium	characteristic	relentless	affiliated independent	liberation	selfie	patriotic
politically	liberal	individualistic	reputation
significantly	distinguishing	reputable	religion

Next, look up any words you don't understand in a dictionary and check their definitions. Write down three words in the space provided.

Now, fill in the blanks below with the best choice of words from the list above.

- Tina took a _____ with her smartphone and then posted it on her Facebook page.
- People with a _____ political philosophy are often in favor of change in society.
- One important _____ of the members of the Millennial Generation is that they are digital natives.
- If you are a _____ person, you are quite willing to show your love for and loyalty to your country.
- A political independent is a person who is not _____ with any political party.

Unit 3 The Changing Generations

Part 2 Sharing Your Ideas
After improving your listening skills, you should now be able to talk more skillfully about the changing generations. The following exercises will give you useful practice.

Q & A
Work with a partner. Take turns asking and answering questions based on the listening scripts. Don't limit yourself to just the suggested questions below. Try to come up with some of your own.

Example 1
Q: Why do we call adults in the 1930s and 40s the Greatest Generation?
A: Because people in that generation did their duty without protest. They were patriotic and family-oriented. The men went away to fight in World War II. That was their duty. But the women stayed home and took care of the family. That was their duty. But the women also went to work and filled the jobs the men used to do in peacetime. Times were hard, but everyone did what was necessary to make the world a better place. Members of that generation indeed were "Great."

Example 2
Q: In what ways do you think younger people are more liberal than their parents?
A: I think being liberal means being more flexible and less judgmental in your thinking. That certainly seems to be the case with many young people when you compare them with their parents. For example, they often support liberal causes such as gay rights, social and economic equality for women, and abortion. Maybe it's because of their youth that they are more willing to accept these new ideas.

Example 3
Q: Why does Japan's government try to implement policies that favor older people?
A: Because they vote in greater numbers than younger people. That means that they make their voice heard. Government officials listen to the older people and attempt to satisfy their wishes. That ensures the same politicians will be returned to office in the next election.

Your Turn!
Work with a partner. Take turns asking and answering questions based on the listening scripts.

- Q: Why are people born after the Baby Boomer generation called Generation X? Why not Generation Y or Generation Z?
A: _____
- Q: What do we mean when we say that Millennials are "digital natives"?
A: _____
- Q: In your opinion, which generation is most different from other generations? Why do you say so?
A: _____

Now you are ready to create some questions and answers of your own. See how many you can come up with on the topic of different generations.
